More about our Presenters for this week: Tuesday - April 11

- Bryan Berenguer - An Introduction to Wine: Bryan Berenguer will discuss a brief history of wine focusing most of the presentation on still and sparkling wine production
- Matthew Mahoney: Matthew Mythology: Stories from an Autistic Art Historian: Matthew is an Autistic scholar and an art history major and for his Carson Research Grant, he created a public-facing podcast with episodes exploring these topics and then delving into the symbol of the labyrinth, exploring its genealogy in art and literature, and then using it as a metaphor to explain his experience as an Autistic person.
- Megan Rodgers: Making it Make Cents: An Update in Descriptions and Catalogues of Antonine Coins at the Hallie Ford Museum of Art: The scope of this research focuses on imperial and provincial coinage from the Antonine Dynasty (136-198 CE). Roman provinces are distinctive in their struggle to maintain their local identity while addressing the invasion of oppressive Roman culture. The coinage collection at the Hallie Ford Museum of Art (HFMA) expresses the hostile attitudes of specific provinces towards the Roman occupation during the Antonine dynasty.

Thursday, April 13

- James Southworth: Bringing Art Home: Bringing Art Home means how we've incorporated what we've seen and experienced artistically throughout our travels into our home. By this we mean not just his pastels paintings, but his art applied directly on our kitchen walls and covering many of our interior doors. James will also be doing a pastel and a lucky ICLmember will win it.
- Rou Rou Hutchinson: Past to Present: What Can Be Learned from the Final Solution of Russian-Sino Dispute: This presentation focuses on the 1991 Sino-Russian border settlement, examining the solution itself and the historical and current impact. In exploring this topic, I use this case study to delve into how China interacts with other states within the international stage as well as what scholars learn from this treaty in investigating current Russian-Sino relations.
- Shawna Merrill: Postmodern Phenomenon: A Critique of the White Cube Museum: This presentation is on the White Cube Museum Model -- the predominant method of exhibition in the museum world since the 1950s. The presentation explores the history of the White Cube, the benefits and drawbacks of the model, and possible alternatives for museums to adopt.
