Academic Support, academicsupport@willamette.edu/503-370-6505, located in the Learning Commons in Ford Hall, offers students assistance in understanding WU's academic expectations and how to meet them. Individual consultations are available for improvement of study strategies, time management, long-term academic planning, etc. Individual tutoring and group study sessions are arranged, free to the student, in person and on Zoom. Contact: Kelvin Clark

Accessible Education Services, accessible-info@willamette.edu/503-370-6737, located in Matthews Hall, facilitates accommodations for qualifying students with permanent or temporary disabilities. They assist students in obtaining appropriate documentation of a disability, developing plans for academic and other campus accommodations, skill development in self-advocacy, and accessing campus resources. Contact: Sue Minder. Fall 2020 will meet remotely, on Zoom.

Health Professions Advising, cbattle@willamette.edu, assists students in planning, preparing, and applying for post-graduate programs in the health professions. Contact: Cooper Battle

Student Academic Grants and Awards jclark@willamette.edu assists students in planning, preparing, and applying for scholarships and fellowships to fund undergraduate study, summer projects, post-graduate projects, and graduate programs. This process includes identifying appropriate programs, gaining appropriate experience, and all stages of the application process. The office also administers three internal grant programs that fund students' summer research and creative projects. Contact: Jeanne Clark

Student Support Advising, jcardinallanier@willamette.edu 503-370-6737, located in Matthews Hall, provides regular meetings with and monitoring of students who are on academic probation. Students meet often with the Student Support Advisor who guides and monitors their academic efforts. Contact: Jessica Cardinal-Lanier. Fall 2020 will meet remotely, on Zoom.

The Writing Center, located in the Learning Commons in Ford Hall, offers one-on-one consultations with writers on any piece of writing and at all phases of composition. We emphasize a conversational model, where the writer sets the agenda, and also provide guidance on using online and print resources. Students can schedule appointments online by joining the Writing Center's WISE site. Contact: Gretchen Flesher Moon. Zoom and in-person appointments are available this Fall.

CAS Additional Sources of Support

Career Development, career-services@willamette.edu/503-370-6413, located on the 3rd floor of the University Center, helps students with career decisions and linking them to resources and helping them launch job searches. They meet with students 1-on-1 and assist with major selection, career direction, and job search strategies. They also help students with job search tools such as resumes, cover letters, and interviewing skills, as well as graduate school decisions and applications.

Counseling Services and the Bishop Wellness Center, 503-370-6471, located in Baxter Hall, offers short-term, solution-focused psychological counseling to assist individual students dealing with personal crises, anxiety, stress, social and academic transitions, family relations, alcohol and other drug problems, and other issues of concern. All counseling services are free and confidential. Several 20 minute, walk-in solution focused appointments are also offered to students every day. Students are encouraged to use the free "Mind Spa," which includes a reclining leather massage chair, a full spectrum "Happy Light", and a computer based biofeedback program where students can learn to moderate their stress response through several interactive video games. Students may also access to 24/7 crisis telephone counseling support by calling WUTalk at 503-375-5353.

The Learning Commons, located on the 1st floor of Ford Hall, is available to CAS students 24/7 for both individual and collaborative study. Stations with glass panels, white boards, and media give students tools to engage in their studies. Three programs are located in the Learning Commons: Academic Support, the World Languages Studio, and the Writing Center.

The Mark O. Hatfield Library provides subject-specialist librarians who meet individually with students to introduce them to efficient and productive approaches to research. Also available from the library's homepage are links to resources and research guides. The library collection includes materials which support course work and the writing of research papers: books, music, DVD's, academic journals, a popular reading section, and many online materials available 24/7. Any materials the library does not own can be borrowed from another academic library at no charge. Please note that there will be changes in hours and services during Fall 2020.

The QUAD Center, located in Smullin 244, provides support related to quantitative activities and assignments associated with courses ranging from statistics courses to senior thesis projects. QUAD stands for Quantitative Understanding, Analysis, and Design. Contacts: James Friedrich and Kelley Strawn

The World Languages Studio, lrc@willamette.edu/503-375-5492, located in the Learning Commons in Ford Hall, is a place where students can come for language learning resources in an area of campus dedicated to language exposure and cultural experience. Also known as Language Learning Center. Contact: Natalia Shevchenko

The University Title IX efforts are led by Jade Aguilar, aguilarj@willamette.edu/ 503-370-6453. Students are invited to schedule with Dr. Aguilar if they have Title IX concerns that are impacting their experience at Willamette.
